

Sophia Kremydi

Sophia Kremydi is Research Director at the Institute of Historical Studies (IHR), Section of Greek and Roman Antiquity (KERA), of the National Hellenic Research Foundation (NHRF). She studied History and Archaeology at the University of Thessaloniki (1979-1984) and obtained her PhD from the same University in 1993.

Her research interests include the study of coinage of the provincial cities under Roman rule (Roman Provincial Coinage), numismatic circulation in the Hellenistic and Roman period through site finds and coin hoards, as well as the coinage, history and institutions of Hellenistic Macedonia. Her research aims at using coins as a primary source for the study of History.

Since 2010 she has been coordinating the "Northern Greece" Programme that focuses on the publication and study of primary sources in Macedonia and Thrace.

Between 2012-2015 she was in charge of the research project "Inscriptions and Coins. New documents from ancient Macedonia" (InCoMac) funded by the Action "Aristeia I" of the Operational Programme "Education and Lifelong Learning".

She has published a monograph on the coinage of the Roman colony of Diium, a volume of Sylloge Nummorum Graecorum on Macedonian coins, a monograph on the hoards from Diium and over 40 papers in journals, conference proceedings and honorary volumes.

She is actually preparing the publication of a monograph on the 'autonomous' coins struck in Macedonia under the Kings as well as the proceedings of a conference on the coinage of Alexander and its role as international currency in the Hellenistic world.

Full CV:

<http://www.eie.gr/nhrf/institutes/igra/cvs/cv-kremydi-en.pdf>

<https://eie.academia.edu/SophiaKremydi>